

Jessie is 24-year-old graphic designer who lives in Raleigh. She grew up an only child in Winston-Salem and attended NC State University. After achieving a bachelor's degree in Digital Media, she found work as a contractor designing logos for businesses in Raleigh. She likes her job because she can communicate with clients through text and email and can work from home. Jessie has diagnosed Selective Mutism, a psychological disorder that makes it impossible to speak with people face-to-face. She would be very happy to use our software because it would allow her to go out to restaurants with family or friends and be able to comfortably order her food. She hates onions so she would be able to communicate that in the special requests' textbox on the app.
